

HKT partners with Quality HealthCare to launch mental health and psychiatric video consultations
First healthcare partner to offer specialist services on the DrGo platform

HONG KONG, March 25, 2021 – HKT (SEHK: 6823) and Quality HealthCare Medical Services (“Quality HealthCare”) today announced the launch of mental health consultations (including counselling and psychotherapy) and psychiatric services on the DrGo platform, providing DrGo users with access to specialty services for the very first time.

HKT’s one-stop telemedicine platform DrGo aims to connect users with registered Hong Kong doctors and other healthcare professionals for video consultations. As one of the largest private medical service providers in Hong Kong, Quality HealthCare has been supporting holistic healthcare while advocating the digitalisation of related services. Given the increasing public awareness of mental health issues, DrGo and Quality HealthCare have joined hands once again to expand the scope of services from general practice only to now include mental health video consultations, empowering users to manage both their physical and mental wellbeing.

The remote psychological consultation provided by Quality HealthCare includes counselling and psychotherapy, as well as psychiatric services. Psychiatric video consultation is the first specialty service being offered on the DrGo platform, providing a more comprehensive healthcare experience for users. The remote counselling and psychotherapy consultation will be conducted by counsellors or registered psychologists, who will help users cultivate a positive attitude and develop an optimistic outlook through education and by establishing a close and trusting relationship with them. Following professional assessment and if deemed necessary, users may be referred to psychiatrists who specialise in mood disorders, psychological problems, insomnia, anxiety, depression and other psychiatric disorders. Users can also directly book a video consultation with a psychiatrist. Appointments can be made via the online booking system on the DrGo platform. Users can then attend their scheduled video consultation from the comfort of their home. The new service not only removes the need for users to physically visit a clinic, but also allows them to choose an environment where they feel safe to share their personal mental health concerns, enhancing the overall treatment progress and experience.

In response to the current pandemic situation, DrGo and Quality HealthCare will jointly provide chronic disease caregivers from South Kwai Chung Social Service with 100 free remote counselling sessions (of 30 minutes each) on the DrGo platform. Through this initiative, the two companies hope to ease some of the stress experienced by these caregivers.

Mr. Ringo Ng, Managing Director of HKT's Consumer Group, said, "When DrGo, HKT's one-stop telemedicine platform, was first launched, we partnered with a number of private hospitals and clinics to provide remote general practice consultations. Our scope of services is now extended to psychological and psychiatric consultations provided by Quality HealthCare, connecting users with registered psychologists and psychiatrists in Hong Kong. Through video consultations, we hope to bring users efficient and prompt mental health support. By employing HealthTech and collaborating with different healthcare providers, we are committed to offering more diverse and more user-friendly remote consultation services. Looking ahead, we aim to expand our services into the areas of chronic disease management and dietary consultations, supporting the public with healthcare services of a higher quality."

Ms. Elaine Chu, General Manager of Quality HealthCare, said, "Public health and wellbeing has always been our top priority at Quality HealthCare. We are dedicated to catering to the healthcare needs of people. Over the recent years, we have actively promoted the advancement of digital healthcare, combining online and offline services to bring the public more comprehensive and personalised protection. This has proved to be even more essential since the onset of the pandemic, which resulted in a significant change in people's lifestyles. We are delighted to be an important partner of DrGo. In addition to remote general practice consultations, we look forward to providing remote psychological counselling and psychotherapy services, as well as psychiatric service which is the first specialty service offered on the platform, together with our other healthcare products and services that are available on the health store. We believe that we can help users overcome some of the barriers to seeking mental health support by allowing them to open up in an environment of their own choosing. This collaboration with DrGo will allow our services to benefit the wider community, helping the public better manage their physical and mental health anytime, anywhere."
