Oil prices: Bears out!

It is not quite the panic. And that makes all the international oil market outcome of elevated prices have been taken up – although it's far from over. Now nearing a six-months' duration, the production can high, both Brent and WTI are still being achieved, at least have gained over 8 percent in little over a month. For the first time since the war in Ukraine, all variables are attack on oil – oil supporting a sustained oil rally, but the bigger geopolitical risk is brewing elsewhere. While Ukraine has intensified attacks on Russia, US crude oil investors, US industrial growth, China demand projections, Opec's unflinching resolve, escalation in the Middle East, UK energy costs, Russia not showing signs of slowing down – every single factor is screaming a tight market in the foreseeable future.

Iran's attack on Iranian oil refineries has resulted in killing of ten Iranian commanders. An Iranian response in kind is unlikely but not of the same scale as the US. The latest push has come around the Ukrainian front, where the impact on demand is substantial, as the loss thus far is minuscule in proportion to Russia's massive share in global production. Despite the extreme divergence on global oil demand growth for 2024, there are more chances of the IEA revising its demand projection upwards in its upcoming short-term energy Outlook in light of strong high-frequency numbers emerging in the world's demand engines.

On the other side, while the US Fed has so far stuck with the monetary stance of a cycle of rate cuts in 2024, although the cuts may still be cautious. All eyes are now on the US core inflation rate, which is expected to drop to 3.5 percent by year-end. The stockpile date, and shale activity will set the tone for the price direction of the next few weeks.

Startups in misery?

Pakistan's startup landscape largely led to solid growth in terms of funding and growth has made significant strides over the last 4-5 years. Increased venture capital interest in 2023 – 2024 has seen notable funding to early-stage startups that has been named but largely? It seems that the interest in VC interest in the tech startup space has been declining; the funding and deal activity has taken a nose-dive in 2023-24.

Investissement in as End of Year 2023, total VC funding for 2023 was a slower year than 2022 in terms of investment activity primarily due to uncertain macroeconomic environment and political unrest. The total VC funding in Pakistan raised $14 million in 2023 versus $150 million plus in 2022, according to a report. This decline was accompanied by global geopolitical impotments that affected the overall investment interest in the VCs worldwide. Data Darbar report, Tech and VC Landscape 2023 suggests that the correction in funding activity was witnessed across the world in 2023, with the total Q4 funding dropped to the lowest since 2019 – by around 35 percent year-over-year in 2023. Data Darbar research also shows that $73 million worth of total funding was raised by the startups in 2023 – down by 77 percent and number of deals falling from 67 in 2022 to 23 in 2023.

The last fund from the contracting funding by the VCs can now also be felt in 2024. The first quarter of 2024 saw limited zero funding from investors in the tech startup space. According to Techshain, a blog that covers startup funding trends in Pakistan and VC Landscape in Pakistan, startups raised $0 in Q1 of 2024, while in a slow start of 2023, the first quarter of 2023 where most of the recovery for 2023 was witnessed.

After a dull and dreary quarter, who could 2024 look like for the startup space? The most big news announced a shutdown in 2023 and 2024 so far, hopes are pinned to PSF and what it will achieve for the ecosystem. The government recently announced Pakistan Startup Fund (PSF) is particularly targeted to offset the challenges of fundraising environment introduced to bolster venture capital investment in the startup ecosystem, the government has set aside Rs 2 billion for the PSF package. The first tranche is aimed to aid startups in raising their first external investment where it will contribute 30 percent of the financing required, equivalent to 700 million

Rs brought in by the VCs.

This and then the recent developments around EMF package could help address the challenges faced by the startup ecosystem. However, space has other challenges too, especially in the sustainability, profitability and regulatory realm that need to be addressed to build an encouraging and resilient ecosystem.
