American Society of Home Inspectors (ASHI) Foundation Announces Continued Commitment to Charitable Giving

These funds will support Habitat for Humanity

Springfield, MA, September 9, 2024 – The ASHI Foundation presented a $1,500 donation and pro-bono inspection services to the Springfield Massachusetts Chapter of Habitat for Humanity to help with their ongoing efforts to make the dream of owning a home tangible for the future homeowners. ASHI President Mark Goodmen and Past ASHI President Mark Goodmen presented the donation at the ASHI New England InspectionWorld On the Road Event.

The goal of ASHI working with Habitat for Humanity is to educate new home recipients and to help them become successful homeowners.

As home inspectors, ASHI members are uniquely positioned to understand the profound significance of a home. Beyond being just a shelter, a house represents a place where families can start new chapters of their lives, come together, and build lasting memories.

“Becoming a homeowner was always a dream of ours.” Said recent Habitat for Humanity award recipients and new homeowners Leslie and Jason. “We would often find ourselves driving down the street on our way home, and we would often talk about how amazing it would be to have more space, a yard, and a home to call our own. This dream seemed just out of reach, about as possible as winning the lottery.”

About ASHI Foundation

The The ASHI Foundation provides an avenue for home inspection professionals to support charitable giving that makes a difference ASHI Foundation

As home inspectors, we aim to help families make smart decisions about buying a home. Given this position, it's safe to say that ASHI understands better than most just how important a home can be. It's more than a roof over a family's head; a house can start the next chapter of one's life. Whether that means creating a place for people to come together or settling down with a family, a home becomes a foundation. Along with education-related awards, the ASHI Foundation will focus on charities centered around housing for needy individuals.

The ASHI Foundation's goal is to have a positive impact on the communities we serve. By teaming up with local and national charitable organizations, the foundation hopes to maximize the amount of service and aid it can provide as inspection professionals. One of the many ways ASHI members can accomplish this goal is by supporting a local charity in the host city of our national conference, InspectionWorld, every year.
