TUNE IN

The President and First Lady reignited the Biden Cancer Moonshot to mobilize a national effort to end cancer as we know it.

We're building a world where the word 'cancer' loses its power, a diagnosis isn't a death sentence, we prevent cancer before it starts, we catch cancer early so people live longer and healthier lives, and patients and families don't have to navigate their cancer journey alone.

Cancer touches every American in some way, and is still the second leading cause of death in America despite the progress we've made in recent decades. By bringing together the federal government, health care providers, researchers, patients, caregivers, advocates, and the public and private sectors, the Cancer Moonshot is dramatically accelerating progress against cancer.

The Cancer Moonshot is mobilizing efforts toward achieving two clear goals that the President and First Lady set: To prevent more than 4 million cancer deaths by 2047 and to improve the experience of people who are touched by cancer.

We can make real progress toward ending cancer as we know it. It will take all of us doing our part. Join us.

About Us Objectives

About Us

The Cancer Moonshot is a White House initiative to bring renewed leadership to the fight against cancer, facilitate new collaborations, and drive progress across the cancer journey utilizing all facets of the oncology community – federal agencies and departments, private companies, healthcare providers, patient groups, philanthropies, and all Americans.

To reach the bold but achievable goals set forth by President Biden, the Cancer Moonshot is mobilizing the:

- Federal government to drive innovative action and life-saving progress forward in ways that reach all Americans.
- Scientific community to bring its boldest thinking to this fight;
- Medical and public health community to improve their outreach to and support for underserved communities, to help patients and families have the best experience possible while living with and surviving cancer, and to improve patient outcomes;
- Private sector to step up – to develop and test new treatments, to share more data and knowledge, and to collaborate on tools that can benefit all Americans; and
- People living with cancer and survivors, their caregivers and families, and those who have lost someone to keep sharing their perspectives and experiences and to keep pushing for progress.
