2:00 – 2:50 p.m. TOPIC FIVE: EMERGING NEW MEDIA AND THE RISE OF INDIVIDUAL JOURNALISM

Rebecca Boone, Supervisory Correspondent, Associated Press of Idaho, and Nate Poppino, Communications Manager, Idaho Supreme Court, will discuss the constitutional values of the news media, how those apply to the current emerging media platforms, and how state courts currently categorize press, and press access in recent high-profile cases.

2:50 – 3:00 p.m. (short break to transition panelists and open CLE part of the program with attorneys/journalists)

3:00 – 4:15 p.m. TOPIC SIX: THE CONSTITUTIONAL INTERSECTION BETWEEN PARENTAL RIGHTS, CHILDREN’S RIGHTS, AND STATE INTERESTS

- This presentation will consider how parents’ rights have shaped legislative proposals across the U.S. in recent years, involving issues ranging from library books, school bathrooms, gender identity, and access to gender-affirming medical treatment. How do courts weigh the rights of parents, minors, and the state? What legal precedents apply? The panel discussion will consider the key cases and constitutional provisions and explore the rights of parents, the rights of minors, and the place where they intersect with government interests. As part of the discussion, our panelists will touch on a variety of topics, including parental rights in the context of domestic relations, child protection, parental termination, adoption, and the Indian Child Welfare Act.
